Russell as Chief Justice of the Colony. To pay at the Magistracy, Mr Wodshouse

of the Secretary of State for the Colonies that of Chief Justice of this Colony cannot be looked on merely as a place I for somebody who wants promotion or an excuse for drawing a comfortable salary. The position is as far as possible from being a sinecure. There is no office in the Government service in which the work, even as regards the mere quantity of it, is greater, nor one the duties of which make such frequent demands on a man's best powers. There is no office in which it is more important. for the Colony that the right man should be placed. In Sir James Russell we had a Chief Justice in whose strong common-sense, wide exparience and the utmost confidence; and it says a. great deal indeed for his successor that, after a comparatively short acquaintance with him, as Puisne Judge and Acting Chief Justice, the community hails his appointment to the principal sest on the Bench with the most cordial approval. Mr Fielding Clarke is not only a very. sound lawyer and able judge, thoroughly conscientious in the discharge of even the smallest of his judicial functions, but has the merit of being a hard working judge who can get through a formidable task very expeditiously, thanks. D Very Fine Old Vintage, uncommon clear-headedness and a could ness of perception which enable him to see into the heart of the matter at a glance. "The law's delays" are often a sore trial to buman patience, and a judge who does what he can towards reducing them to a minimum is entitled to be 7.50 0.75 regarded as a public benefactor. We may rely on the business of the Court over which Mr Fielding Clarks presides being conducted with as much despatch 1.00 as is consistent with the demands of justice; and if the Secretary of State would confer still another benefit on Hongkong by appointing Mr A. G. Wise to the now vacant Paisne-Judgeship, there would probably be as little reason to complain of the 'law's delays' in this Colony as in any part of Her Majesty's dominious. TELEGRAMS.
